ACI - GTP10015 Good Training Practice Based on ISO 10015 Certification

Since talent is an indispensable element and valued asset to the development of an organization, most of the organizations are concerned about training for the staff. However, many of them do not have a clear concept that what kind of training and how much training should be provided to the staff.

To solve this problem, ACI - GTP 10015, Guidelines for Training that can help an organization to identify and analyze training needs, design and plan the training, provide for the training, evaluate training outcomes, monitor, improve and validation of the training process in order to achieve its objectives. It emphasizes the contribution of training to continual improvement and is intended to help organizations make their training a more effective and efficient investment.

To stand out in this competitive market need not only posting advertisement, but also a well designed and well organized internal training strategy.

Benefits:

- Provide training courses that fit the organization's structure and objectives
- Support organizations' continual improvement via effective training
- Enhance the corporate image to stand out from competitors
- Raise employee awareness on significance of training for career development

GMP : A symbol of confidence Certification

Besides Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Point (HACCP), Good Manufacturing Practice (GMP) is another common practice for the control and management of manufacturing and quality control testing of foods. Similar to HACCP, GMP is also a worldwide recognized standard.

By random sampling, GMP takes a holistic approach of regulating the manufacturing and laboratory testing environment itself. This ensures the result of testing to be statistically sound.

An important part of GMP, namely the documentation of every aspect of the process, activities, and operations involved with food manufacture. These documentations provide traceability of future problems that the products do not meet the required specification set by the standard.

The requirements set by GMP lie in four main areas:

1. Premises, facilities and equipment
2. Cleaning, sanitation and maintenance
3. Personal hygiene
4. Control of operation

Benefits:

- An international standard endorsed FDA in the US and other National Regulatory Agencies in different countries
- Traceability of errors and non-conformities during the food manufacturing processes
- The quality of all manufacturing and testing equipments is secured by GMP
- To give customers great confidence in the quality of food products
